

INTERJURISDICTIONAL COORDINATION ELEMENT

The Interjurisdictional Coordination element's goal is to promote the coordination of planning, financing, and implementation programs between the county and local jurisdictions, including tribal governments.

The Interjurisdictional Coordination strategy is:

“a meaningful effort to bring all parties together to identify concerns, discuss issues, examine solutions, resolve problems, and employ joint approaches, where appropriate, to manage the uncoordinated and unplanned growth posing a threat to the environment, economic development and high quality of life.”

Key Interjurisdictional Coordination Element Policy Amendments for the 2024 Update

- Add a minimum residential density requirement to the list of interjurisdictional issues that may be addressed in interlocal agreements.
- Modify word choice so that the coordination of county and city regulations is optional, as County discretion and design will be needed for certain projects.
- Remove Snohomish Health District policy as the Snohomish County Health Department is no longer a separate jurisdiction.
- Word choice changes due to language sensitivity.
