Public meetings to gather input on county's draft hazard mitigation plan

Do you know the natural hazards that affect where you work and live?

Snohomish County Department of Emergency Management is holding three public workshops to share and discuss a completed draft of the 2015 Hazard Mitigation Plan for Snohomish County. This is an opportunity for residents to learn about the hazards that affect Snohomish County.

The draft plan also lists potential action items to reduce damages and reduce risks to safety from natural hazards. Community members will have the opportunity to discuss the information in the plan and give their thoughts and ideas about ways to reduce risks from natural hazards. The three open-house public workshops will be held in different locations around Snohomish County.
