Dear Owner/Resident: The Snohomish County Design Review Board (DRB) is holding a public meeting on March 15 at 6:00 PM regarding the proposed redevelopment at Point Wells. The proposal is to replace the existing industrial uses with 3,080 residential units, public amenities, retail and services. The DRB is an advisory body that takes public input and makes recommendations on design issues of projects proposed under Snohomish County's Urban Center zoning. The DRB does not make final decisions on development proposals.

Further Information

After the Design Review Board provides its design recommendations to Snohomish County Planning and Development Services (PDS), PDS will make an independent recommendation to the Hearing Examiner regarding the Point Wells project. The PDS recommendation pertains to all aspects of the project and will include responses to the design recommendations provided by the DRB. The Hearing Examiner will then hold an open record hearing that will include an opportunity for additional public input.

After closing the hearing, the Hearing Examiner will make a decision on the project. The open record hearing before the Hearing Examiner has not yet been scheduled.

Additional notice will be sent once the open record hearing is scheduled.
