Hello Ms. McClelland,

I have to apologize. I and two other Planning & Development Services (PDS) staff have been working to put most of the Point Wells applications materials on the Snohomish County website to make it easy for people to view project plans, reports and other documents. Unfortunately, we have not been able to do that yet due to the need to work on other land use applications. We hope to be able to get the Point Wells web page up in the next couple of weeks.

Currently, the Point Wells short plat, urban center and shoreline permit applications are under first review by PDS and the Public Works Department. The first review has not been completed at this time.

I believe you may be able to access a brief summary of the project review status on-line. I have not tried it, so I'm not sure what information will come up. If you go to the PDS home page and click on the "Permit Zoning Map" link, then type one of the site parcel numbers (270335-003-011-00) in the "Find Parcel ID" box on the left the parcel will come up. If you click on the "View Permit Information" box on the left, you should get a summary of the current project review status.
