

The Robb farm borders the Stillaguamish River on Norman Road, south of Stanwood. A dairy operation, cherry orchard and the sale of timber supported founder Robert's and his son John Robb's families. John's son Arnold married Violet Robb who bore four sons, all of whom grew up on the farm. She, her sons, and their families continue to celebrate the farm's heritage, with son Dennis and his wife, Jan, living in the original home. All of the brothers, Dennis, Ron, Alan and Tom, although holding down other non-farm jobs, now cooperate in the management of the farm, growing field corn for sale to a neighboring dairy.
